Plan To Secure Site Junior High School

Steadily Increasing Enrollment Makes Addition Necessary

Under sponsorship of the Ocean Beach chamber of commerce a public meeting is being called for next Monday evening at 8 p. m., at the Ocean Beach woman's club with a view of having set aside and deeded to the San Diego City schools sufficient of Collier park in the Loma Alta section, upon which may be built a junior high school plant.

Members of the City School Board have signified their intention of being present; also Clarence R. Swenson, principal of Point Loma high school, and other school heads have been invited as well as the presidents of the PTA's and members of all other civic organizations.

There is a crying need for a junior high school to relieve the crowded condition at Point Loma high.

It is just ten years since this school was being built with a capacity of some 500 students. The enrollment has more than doubled in ten years and according to authorities the Point Loma section will again double in population in the next eight years, therefore the extreme importance of looking to future needs, especially since present ones are not adequate.

The following figures show annual October reports by the principal of Point Loma high for the past ten years:

	Junior High	Senior High	Total Enrol.
1925	330	99	429
1926	408	135	543
1927	416	175	591
1928	435	229	664
1929	521	233	754
1930	511	283	794
1931	556	333	889
1932	537	420	957
1933	551	406	957
1934	629	444	1083

Parents and others interested in school problems should study closely the conclusions which have been drawn:

(a) In nine years Point Loma's enrollment has increased from 429 to 1083 students.

(b) This gain has been steady and consistent with the exception of one year—1933, in which there was no increase over the previous October. However, the second semester last year showed the usual increase, with a peak enrollment of 1026, and this fall (1934) an exceptionally large entering 17 class boosted the total for an unusual gain.

Studies made by the City Planning Commission indicate that the Point Loma and State College areas are due for 100% increase in population by 1942, as the two most rapidly growing sections of the city.

(d) Overcrowded conditions in two of the elementary schools in the Point Loma area have compelled the building of additional rooms this year—and these youngsters will soon be coming to Point Loma junior high.

(e) The present enrollment taxes the capacity of Point Loma high school to the limit and some plan must be worked out to care for the anticipated increase next year.

Several suggestions have been made by interested citizens and we believe the most feasible would be for the city of San Diego to deed twenty or thirty acres of Collier park, all of which is unimproved, to the City School system, that the School Board may have built thereon during the coming summer or as soon as money is available, a four class room plant to take care of one or two grades of the new incoming junior high pupils, then add to this junior high school as enrollment increases.

Educators generally agree that the 7th and 8th grade pupils going to a combined junior-senior high are always more or less of a problem until they adjust themselves to older standards, and this adjustment would be much easier if carried through two schools.

Other plans have been mentioned. One of these plans is to build class rooms as an additional story to the present high school, but this plan is not in favor at present in the construction of school buildings. A short school day for the younger students we think would not take care of the increase properly even if some were to go in the mornings and others in the afternoons. In this section, the beaches or Point Loma, there are no other schools conveniently located that might be used by a division of territory.

A lot of additional facilities are needed for the proper training of our young folks. We especially need manual training, auto and machine shop, electricity, and instruction along these lines not given the students here now. The most necessary are the class rooms, then in addition more girls physical education facilities, a gym and a social hall. The boys too need a field house with shower rooms which should be separate structure from the class rooms.

It is said, the people will have to vote a part of Collier park to the School System, but it is a constructive move and would give the schools a valuable site at practically no cost and very convenient to the street car system. Junior high pupils now come from all parts of Point Loma, Mission Beach, Old Town and extending into the Mission Hills section. At Collier park they would not have to transfer from street car to bus as is now the case, with very crowded accommodations going to and leaving the school grounds.

Parents and others interested are urged to be present next Monday evening at 8 p. m., and offer useful suggestions in this project.

OCEAN BEACH PTA TO HAVE SEWING CLASS

For several years, instruction in homemaking has been provided for girls of the public elementary and secondary school systems. In recent years classes for adults have been organized. The time is not far distant when training program in wholesome living will be demanded by both sexes including youth and adults.

The Ocean Beach woman's club has kindly offered the use of one of its rooms for the use of the PTA sewing class until such time as the new school building is completed. This class will meet Tuesday and Wednesday mornings from 9 until 12 with free equipment furnished and will be under the direction of Mrs. Lewis Williams. This is a free class and is open to all women.

The second term of the San Diego evening high school opened December 3rd. Full information concerning other homemaking and adult classes may be obtained at the office of the department of Adult Education, San Diego, high school building, 12th and Ash streets. Phone M-1444.

Bill and Mrs. Walters, well known in Ocean Beach as caretakers at Camp Holiday, have returned from Ohio where they went to make their home some time ago. Friends report the Walters as mighty glad to be back in San Diego county.

FORMER MAYOR TELLS KIWANIS ABOUT WATER

Irwin J. Claspill was chairman of the day at Wednesday's Kiwanis session, having as guest speaker former mayor Harry C. Clark, who in a round table talk answered many questions regarding the water resources, supply and costs, for San Diego. The questions were plentiful but the speaker was well informed in every project the city has been interested in since it took over its first source of supply, the Otay lake and dams, from the Spreckels companies.

The question was of such great interest and time allotted did not satisfy Mr. Clark's listeners, so he has promised to come again, Wednesday, Dec. 19, and give the members whatever information they may desire.

Dad Thayer was presented with a book by the president, Myron Insko, the gift being in honor of his 82nd birthday which took place on Dec. 4th. Dr. Thayer received the congratulations of his fellow members in commemoration of the event.

Sam Frazee, lieutenant governor, was a visitor from the San Diego club and the following six Kiwanians from La Jolla were also present: Nathan L. Ranella, Clarence E. Johnson, I. N. Stephen Hassand, Truman Parker, Joe Zarick and Carl Messner.

Mr. and Mrs. Sew and Sow OF OCEAN BEACH

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Foster have taken their places here as useful and sociable citizens. Mrs. Foster is a designer and maker of artistic clothes. Her large experience was acquired in Wales and Canada, where her clientele included many people of social prominence. Her wholesome and pleasing personality wins for her many friends. An advertisement recently in The Ocean Beach News brought amazing results. One pleased customer brings another, and her pretty home at 4971 Santa Cruz avenue is now a scene of continuous activity up to January 1st. Mrs. Foster says she is very happy in pleasing people by her flair for sewing.

Mr. Foster is a landscape gardener. Among his notable achievements here was the management of Alligator Rock Lodge, assisted by his wife as hostess. His skillful landscaping converted the grounds into delightful gardens. Mr. Foster seems to have discovered the fact that "inside of flowers there is a power no one knows."

People who give thus generously of their talents in creating beauty deserve all praise as well as honorable mention.

Miss Mary Kate Allen has traveled far and wide throughout the world. She received her education as a trained nurse in New York, and thereafter her work brought into her life vital and varied experiences—among them, post-war work in Czechoslovakia, Poland and Serbia. She is a member of the Overseas League of San Diego, Red Cross and American Foreign Legion, and is also lending her interest to the pool for crippled children in this city. She now resides quietly at 4995 Del Monte avenue.

When the stress of life is over, it is then that secluded lives demand something beautiful to love. Miss Allen loves cats. "I've not had a pet since I left home," she said; so when a lovely white Persian, with one blue eye and the other gray, followed her home one day she took it to her heart. In the sowing of seeds of kindness to animals there is a reward as great as to humans. The little newcomer became at once a loved companion with exclusive tastes. She repelled all neighborhood alley admirers, but when a princely black Persian appeared mysteriously from nowhere she eyed him favorably. He tarried briefly and then was seen no more. There is now a very interesting animal study in Miss Allen's home—twin kittens, one coal black and the other snow white.—M. P.

(POINT LOMA HIGH SCHOOL)

This week has been a busy one for the music department at Point Loma High. On Monday morning the combined glee clubs gave an assembly program at Herbert Hoover High. On Thursday afternoon over KGB at 1:30 they broadcasted. And on Thursday evening at the Cuyamaca club they gave a program to the Principals' and Supervisors' club. Their Wednesday assembly program in connection with the Thanksgiving Pageant was a lovely thing to start with. The three following appearances have fulfilled its promise admirably by the finish and harmony of their rendering of Russian Sacred and American Folk songs. Mr. Green is to be congratulated on the mark of these sixty songsters.

Thru the Music department, on Wednesday morning of this past week the SERA band gave two fine forty-minute concerts for students and public in the auditorium at Point Loma High. The opera selections interpreted make it easy to believe some of these players were with Sousa, some with Pryor, and some in philharmonic orchestras before they joined the SERA band under Mr. Larkin's direction.

—PLHS—

On Monday afternoon of this past week, Judge Arthur T. Mundo spoke to the junior high students in two classes studying Problems of American Government under Miss Shafer. Not only did the Judge ably gauge the age and comprehension of his listeners in a talk on law in the past and at present, but he aroused their interest in an invitation to visit court. They will in all probability accept that invitation very soon.

Omer Stone, a Loman in the tenth grade, has just signed a contract with Tom Mix's Circus as a member of the well known tumblers, the Jordan family. Omer will leave Point Loma High in February for a months winter training with the Jordans in Los Angeles till early in March when he will be on the two weeks' circus bill in Los Angeles and from there will go to San Francisco and thence East during the spring and summer months.

That indefinable air which recently characterizes Coach Beerle is due to the fact that he is the father of a little girl born week before last. The little daughter and her mother are doing excellently, and the coach's springy step may indicate that he believes he helped Betsy kill the bear.

On Tuesday afternoon of Dec. 11 at 2:45 Miss Clark will talk to the San Diego Woman's club at the clubhouse opposite the public library on the subject "An Estimate of Recent American Fiction". A week ago at the home of Mary Kearns of the eleventh grade, Miss Clark spoke to the Girl Reserves and their sponsor, Mrs. Thuli, on "Historic Jewelry".

TO ASK FOR CLEAN-UP

A committee from the Ocean Beach chamber of commerce will meet Saturday morning at 11 a. m. with the San Diego County Planning Commission to present a clean-up program for this particular section.

The Planning Commission is holding a public meeting at the designated time asking for constructive suggestions in the development of a general clean-up for the whole of San Diego; so that our city will be more presentable and a better impression made with visitors to the Exposition next year.

Nineteen New Pupils At Elementary School

The new Ocean Beach school building, just completed, has been accepted by the Board of Education. The steam heating plant is undergoing the last stages of construction. A general celebration will be held during the week of January 14-18, 1935 and will culminate in the dedication of the new building. The program by days will be announced later.

The children in the low-fourth grade in Miss Neal's room will sing Christmas carols at the PTA meeting on December 12, at the Methodist church. The carols that the children will sing are: Hark, the Herald Angels Sing, Deck the Hall and Come All Ye Faithful.

The low 6 grade in Miss Shea's room will also give a short Christmas play to complete the program. Alex Watson, Billy Nelson, Donald Davis, Warren Stone, Elizabeth Wisdom, Joan Soper and Elizabeth Long have written the play and are taking the different parts.

The school enrolled 19 new children on Dec. 3. Many of them came from other states and some were former students of the Ocean Beach school. Rebecca Fields has just arrived from Chickasa, Oklahoma, Cleo, Jack and Charles Brown have come from Washington school. Billy Brown, formerly of Garfield school entered H1 grade. Edith and Martin Samuels have transferred from McKinley as well as Everett and Helen Douglas. Walter Ward formerly attended Garfield school. Lane Usery and Wm. and John Welch who were former students of Ocean Beach school, have returned to this school. David Blackman, formerly of El Cajon, Calif., is now living in Ocean Beach. Three children, Virginia, Arlene and Edward Williamson, have come to us from Rochester, New York. Joyce Gimeson, H2, was a student in Long Beach, and Ross and Barbara Dalrymple are making their home here, after having moved from Pocatello, Idaho.

Last week Dr. John P. Gilmer made a flying business trip by auto to San Francisco, going north Sunday and returning Tuesday.

Chas. Varney, Jr., of Alhambra and Joe Varney of Los Angeles were guests here over the week end at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Varney, 4728 Saratoga avenue. Thanksgiving dinner was enjoyed by the family at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Stivers.

Mrs. Emelia Arnholt, age 76, a native of Ohio, passed away December 4th, 1934, at the home here of her daughter, Mrs. Elsa Sayles, 4796 Brighton avenue. Deceased was the mother of Ed Varnholt of Cincinnati, Ohio. Clifford Varnholt of Mansfield, Ohio; Emelia Newby of Salt Lake City; and Mrs. B. B. Sayles, Ocean Beach. She is also survived by a sister, Elizabeth Rudolph of Cincinnati, seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. The remains were sent to Ohio for services and interment after lying in state Wednesday, December 5th.

What About Christmas Decorating Here

We notice some of the thriving shopping centers of San Diego have a Santa Claus sponsored by the merchants of that particular section. The idea is a good one, it brings sharply to mind that Christmas is approaching rapidly.

If our people are not invited into our stores or their interest aroused in shopping at Ocean Beach it is a sure thing there are plenty of inducements offered them to shop elsewhere. Just having your store open and being there to wait on folks is not real merchandising in the present day and age.

And some decorations too would do no harm, a few strings of colored lights across Newport avenue and a large banner saying "Merry Christmas" or "Holiday Greetings" would help enliven the Christmas spirit and make us all feel a little more cheerful and friendly toward our neighbor.

Kraft's Drug Has Large Stock of Merchandise

The Kraft Drug Store, corner Newport and Bacon streets, in Ocean Beach, is a well stocked, up-to-date, merchandising establishment which offers you the large variety carried by all modern drug stores at the present time. You will find useful Christmas gifts for any member of the family.

Kraft's right now is making a specialty of carrying full lines of wines, liquors, cordials, champagnes, whiskey and gin. Look at this complete stock and large assortment to choose from at right prices.

A special feature for a Christmas gift is one full gallon of fine liquor in a charred barrel for $5.95.

Mr. and Mrs. Lutz of St. Paul, Minn., arrived here this week and will make their home for the winter months with Mrs. Emily West at 4720 Saratoga avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Lutz have visited this section previously and we are pleased to welcome them back to Southern California.

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Lehigh arrived this week from Cripple Creek, Colo., and will remain at Ocean Beach until after the holidays or perhaps until spring. While here last spring the Colorados bought several residence properties in Ocean Beach and are now looking after these investments. They are making their home at 4875 Long Branch avenue.

E. A. Walker, husband of Mrs. Walker, director of the Warren Walker school, is still confined to the La Jolla hospital where he was taken more than two months ago suffering from a severe attack of asthma. Mr. Walker for a time was critically ill and had to be kept in an oxygen tent. He is now believed to be somewhat improved and the additional breathing apparatus has to be used only a few hours each day.

CURRENT EVENTS PASS IN REVIEW

BUSINESS SEEKS TO ASSIST IN DIRECTING PROGRAM FOR NATIONAL RECOVERY.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

MORE and more it becomes evident that President Roosevelt intends to pursue a middle of the road policy in his efforts for national recovery, and that in the overwhelming Democratic next congress there will be no one faction strong enough to dictate to him. The Chief Executive and the business leaders of the country are gradually coming together, and if and when they reach an accord on methods it will be found that a good many of the more radical ideas of the brain trusters will have been discarded. The best minds in industry and finance are no longer standing back and merely criticizing. They are taking an active part in planning for the future welfare of the nation. Here-with are summarized some of the important new developments in this direction:

President Henry I. Harriman of the United States Chamber of Commerce, in pursuance of a resolution adopted by the board of directors, has appointed a committee of six men, headed by Silas Strawn of Chicago, to co-operate with other business and agricultural associations in drafting plans for the recovery of business. The board of the chamber endorsed the continuation of relief and housing, but signified that business is still opposed to the unbalanced budget, further reduction of working hours as embodied in the movement for a 30-hour week, new and unprecedented outlays for public works, continuance of the NRA, the doctrine of majority rule in collective bargaining, and unemployment insurance.

Through the National Association of Manufacturers, invitations were sent to every manufacturer in the United States to attend a national industrial conference in New York on December 5 to draft "constructive recommendations" for presentation to President Roosevelt. Among those signing the call for this meeting was John J. Raskob, former chairman of the Democratic party. Included in the questions the industrialists will try to answer are:

What in the future should be the relation of government to business?

How is the gigantic problem to be met to relieve distress and at the same time not plunge the nation into bankruptcy or threaten its credit?

How is the new flow of private capital into legitimate investment to be stimulated?

What new moves to curtail unemployment are practical and feasible?

In a petition addressed to the President and congress the National Economy league has presented a definite program for balancing the federal budget in the coming fiscal year, holding that only by balancing the budget can sustained national recovery be accomplished. The petition proposes heavy reductions in government expenditures and additional taxes totaling $335,000,000, but does not presume to suggest how the new taxes should be raised.

The league's proposed budget is given in round numbers as follows:

RECEIPTS
(In Millions of Dollars.)
Income taxes	$1,250
Excise and miscellaneous taxes	1,500
Processing taxes	300
Customs	300
Miscellaneous	150
Total	$3,500
RFC repayments	$1,000
New taxes	935
Total receipts	$5,435

EXPENDITURES
(In Millions of Dollars.)
Estimated general expenditures:
Interest on debt	$ 900
Departmental expenses	700
Veterans administration	625
National defense	500
Agricultural adjustment payments	300
Total	$3,025
Estimated emergency expenditures:
Federal relief	$1,000
Public works	1,000
Civilian conservation corps	350
Grand total	$5,435

NOT so pleasing to the industrialists were the two speeches the President delivered during his inspection of the Tennessee valley project, for his predictions are borne out, his "revolution" will bring about the death of private enterprise in the power industry. At Tupelo, Miss., he declared himself flatly for public ownership of public utilities, saying: "What you are doing here is going to be copied in every state in the Union before we are through"; the allusion being to the fact that Tupelo has contracted for TVA power.

In Birmingham the President said: "I am aware that a few of your citizenry are leaving no stone unturned to block and harass and delay this great national program. I am confident, however, that these obstructionists, few in number in comparison with the whole population, do not reflect the views of the overwhelming majority."

"I know, too, that the overwhelming majority of your business men, big and little, are in hearty accord with the great undertaking of regional planning now being carried forward."

Of the government power projects, Mr. Roosevelt said: "This is not regimentation. It is community rugged individualism. It is not the kind of rugged individualism that allows an individual to do this, that or any other thing that will hurt his neighbor. He is forbidden to do that from now on—and it is a mighty good thing."

"But he is going to be encouraged in every known way from the national capitol and state capitol and the county seat to use his individualism in co-operation with his neighbors' individualism so that he and his neighbors may improve their lot in life."

The President said there probably would be "a certain amount of—what shall I say?—rugged opposition to this development, but I think that opposition is fast fading."

WHEN the federal conference on economic security met in Washington, nearly all the members of the advisory committees were present. The President told the delegates that he would present to the coming congress bills to provide for setting up immediately an unemployment insurance program. As to health insurance and old age pensions, he said he was not certain the time had arrived for federal legislation to put these into effect, and he uttered a warning against "organizations promoting fantastic schemes" and arousing hopes "which cannot possibly be fulfilled."

Though Mr. Roosevelt conceded to the separate states the right to decide what type of unemployment insurance they would adopt, he declared that he would reserve to the federal government the right to hold and invest and control all moneys which might be collected.

This was necessary, the President added, because of the magnitude of the funds, and "so that the use of these funds as a means of stabilization may be maintained in central management and employed on a national basis." It is expected that from $4,000,000,000 to $5,000,000,000 would be raised in the course of several years.

PHILADELPHIA lawyers are traditionally supposed to be able to unravel the worst of tangles, so President Roosevelt has picked one to be chairman of the national labor relations board. He is Francis Biddle, of the famous family of that name, and he succeeds Lloyd K. Garrison, who retired from the chairmanship to resume his duties as dean of the law school of the University of Wisconsin.

Francis Biddle has been engaged in law practice as a member of the Philadelphia firm of Barnes, Biddle, and Meyers. He served from 1922 to 1926 as assistant district attorney for the eastern district of Pennsylvania. In his new post his task will be the settlement of labor disputes arising out of the recovery act, especially those involving collective bargaining.

FORTY-FIVE new bills were pushed through the Louisiana legislature in five days with Senator Huey Long on the rostrum telling the legislators just what to do, but seldom stopping to tell them why. The "Kingfish" says he now is in position to make the state a Utopia, or rather, in his own words, "the kind of state nobody has dreamed of." It is the general belief that he hopes his "share the wealth" program will ultimately land him in the White House.

The senator's most ambitious legislation is the statute proclaiming a two-year moratorium for harassed debtors. Another bill sets up a civil service commission, composed of state administration leaders, with power to remove police and fire chiefs. That will give Long control of virtually all municipal policemen and firemen. Long said the bill was intended to take them "out of politics."

Long's first contemplated move to bring his new laws into use was disclosed when he announced Clint O'Malley, Alexandria chief of police, would have to be removed from office by the civil service commission because he permitted "two riots in the public square."

WHILE seemingly futile conversations about naval limitation are continuing in London, the United States and Japan are engaged in what looks like a little game of bluff. Secretary Swanson, after asserting the American navy would be built up to full treaty strength, and that this country could beat any others in a navy construction race, intimated the other day that it might be a good plan to send one of our great navy dirigibles on a trip to the Philippines.

Vice Admiral Sankichi Takahashi, new commander in chief of the combined Japanese fleet, declared Japan was determined to retain the west Pacific mandate islands at any cost; and that Japan's claim to naval equality with Great Britain and the United States with a view to an all-round reduction of armaments is the fairest and most reasonable scheme imaginable. As Japan is leaving the League of Nations, the mandate given her after the war by the league over the Marianne, Caroline and Marshall islands is likely to come up at Geneva next year. Admiral Takahashi says the Japanese navy is ready to resist forcibly any attempt to take these islands away from Japan.

TWO really eminent men and useful citizens passed away in recent days. One was Justice Frederic De Young of the Supreme court of Illinois, who had served the public long and well. The other was Cardinal Pietro Gasparri, most accomplished diplomat of the Vatican, who was papal secretary of state during the World war and until 1929.

E. I. DU PONT DE NEMOURS & Co. has supplied most of the government's explosives almost ever since the establishment of the Republic, and during the World war, according to testimony before the senate special committee on munitions, the concern received orders totaling one billion two hundred and forty-five million dollars and paid dividends totaling 453 per cent of the par value of its original stock.

At the request of Chairman Gerald P. Nye of the committee, Lamont du Pont, president of the company, has set forth his recommendations concerning the business of war munitions. These are, in brief, the elimination of all excessive wartime earnings applied to every business and every individual, and federal control over the export of munitions.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has gone to his winter retreat at Warm Springs, Ga., where he will remain until after Thanksgiving day, and on the way had some interesting experiences. First he traveled to Harrodsburg, Ky., where he helped Gov. Ruby Laffoon and other officials in the unveiling and dedication of a memorial to the men and women who established there the first permanent Anglo-Saxon settlement west of the Alleghenies. The monument, erected by the federal government at a cost of $100,000, overlooks Pioneer Memorial State park. It depicts an epoch rather than an event, and the only portrait among the many carved figures is that of George Rogers Clark, who there planned his conquest of the old northwest territory.

From Harrodsburg the President went to see the Tennessee valley development which has been well called the laboratory of the "more abundant life." It was with deepest interest that he viewed the work that is being done by about 1,200 men building dams in the Tennessee river and tributaries to provide power, flood control, navigation and new fields of work for persons drawn from unprofitable land.

After a visit to the Hermitage, home of Andrew Jackson at Nashville, Mr. Roosevelt inspected the revived Muscle Shoals plants and the Wheeler and Wilson dams, and then went to Tupelo, Miss., the first town to purchase power from the new federal development. Senator Pat Harrison introduced him at exercises in the town square. The party continued to Warm Springs by way of Birmingham.

FOR the purpose of obtaining better co-operation among federal agencies engaged in lending government funds, the President has appointed a committee consisting of the heads of the agencies, with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau as chairman. The new organization will report to the President from time to time and its activities will cover the treasury, interior, public works, federal housing, farm credit, Home Owners' Loan corporation, agricultural adjustment administration, export-import banking, commodity credit, federal deposit insurance, the RFC, federal reserve board and public works housing.

In connection with this co-ordinating move, the White House stated that when the present applications of the Home Owners' Loan corporation have been reduced to terms of approval the original $3,000,000,000 allotment will have been used up.

ANDREW MELLON may now have another cause for grievance against the federal Treasury department, for the government has made charges against the Union Trust company of Pittsburgh, a Mellon institution, of filing "a false and fraudulent income tax return" for 1930 in a tax action demanding payment of $218,333 plus a 50 per cent penalty.

In supporting its claim, the government listed eight transactions in 1931 as evidence that all were "a part of a false and fraudulent course of conduct on the part of said Union Trust company." Among the 1931 transactions were two "accommodation" deals with Andrew W. Mellon.

UNCLE SAM need expect no payment from France on the war debt on December 15, when the next installment is due. It is stated in Paris that France will then default for the fifth straight time. Pierre Etienne Flandin, new premier, opposed payment in 1932, when he was minister of finance, and his cabinet is now taking the same position as the previous government—awaiting an Anglo-American settlement which would serve as a basis for Franco-American negotiations.

The only idea for revision of the debts that has met with any enthusiasm in French parliamentary circles is a 10 per cent payment to correspond with the reparations relief granted Germany by the Lausanne agreement. Proposals for larger amounts, or "payment in kind," have met with coldness. The chamber of deputies is clinging to the position that France will not pay one cent more than it gets from Germany.

FEDERAL JUDGE CHARLES L. DAWSON of Louisville, Ky., overruling an attack on the validity of the Frazier-Lemke farm moratorium act, declared "with regret" that it is constitutional. In his opinion he said:

"The legislation, in some of its provisions, is unfair to creditors, and unwise even as to farm debtors, for it inevitably closes to them all private sources of credit."

Fascist "Martyrs" Are Interred at Florence

The bodies of 37 early victims of the Fascist fight for power in Italy, who fell in clashes with Communists, being carried in the solemn procession that preceded their interment in the Basilica of Santa Croce in Florence. The ceremony, attended by Premier Mussolini, was on the twelfth anniversary of Mussolini's famous march on Rome.

Colombian Warship Attached by a Seaman

Unless the skipper is willing to risk international complications, this warship, Cacuta of the Republic of Colombia, cannot leave Philadelphia navy yard, where it was purchased, until Robert Green, U. S. seaman, gets $1,000 in back pay. He had been working on the ship for six months. The ship was "attached" on Green's behalf by United States Marshal Harry Baker, who clamped a padlock on the rail.

Bad Crack in Washington Monument

William M. Greig, government engineer, examining a large crack which extends through the entire thickness of one of the marble blocks near the top of the Washington monument. Only the lightning rods have held the huge piece of marble in place, and the whole stone will have to be replaced in order to make the monument structurally sound.

Off on a Five-Year World Cruise

Jack Lowry (left) and Dwight Long, each twenty-one and students of Washington university, have left Los Angeles harbor on their way to Honolulu as the first leg in a five-year world cruise. They are voyaging on the Idle Hour, 32-foot auxiliary schooner. With them is Hugo, their mascot.

VOLCANO PUPS

Father Hubbard, Alaska's famous "Padre of the Snows," is pictured with the seven male pups that were born in an Alaskan volcano crater in the Aglileen pinnacles, wildest part of the Alaskan peninsula. "Margie," their mother, carried them in a pack sack on her back for a month. They were "taxied" over ridges, across rivers and through swamps that had never before been traversed by white men.

Samaritan Descendants

There still lives at Nablus (Sichem) in Palestine, a group of some 200 Samaritans, direct descendants of Israelite tribes who are mentioned in the Bible and who as early as the fourth century B. C. formed a separate sect.

SENTIMENT AND THE BUGGY WHIP CAN JOIN HANDS

A surprising bit of information turns up among the news miscellany—the fact that $300,000 worth of buggy whips are manufactured in America annually. At an average price of $1 that would amount to 300,000 buggy whips that are still flourished somewhere in our motorized nation. We haven't seen such a whip in years, and the revelation of their continued dominance gives us a thrill—a thrill compounded of ancient memories, bitter and sweet.

The buggy whip was no mean factor in the civilization and social life of the '90's. Behold the display of them in any village store—a dozen, 50, 100 of them, suspended from a special rack, close side by side, differing in length, weight, composition, flexibility, the loaded or unloaded butt, the "cracker" of twine, rawhide or what not, and showing along the stocks all the color combinations that art could devise.

This was a display which a young man of 40 years ago would scrutinize long and judiciously. For a nice discrimination in buggy whips might determine the elate of his exhibition in driving a high-stepper down Main street on Saturday afternoon, and it might make all the difference between success and failure in his attempt to captivate the reigning belle of the town. There are more graying men than you imagine who, owe what they are today to their wives—and so, indirectly, to their buggy whips.

Three hundred thousand of them made and sold annually! We know a lot of urban limousine riders who if they got hold of one would fall into reveries of it as sentimental as those of their helmsmen over lavender and old lace.—Detroit News.

Illnesses Costly

People in the United States spend about $700,000,000 a year for medicine and drugs. According to the 1930 census figures there were 122,775,046 people in the United States. Now there are 125,000,000. This means an annual per capita consumption of about $5 worth of medicine and drugs. The figure is independent of money paid out for doctors or hospital care.—Pathfinder Magazine.

If you tire easily—

why not reason out the cause of this unnatural condition?

Your first thought may be, "I must eat more." That's not all. You should enjoy what you do eat. Frequently, the blood cells are low... and this, perhaps, is what makes you feel weak. If this is your trouble the stomach may not be calling for sufficient food. Zest to eat may be lacking. But what a difference S.S.S. makes when taken just before meals. Just try it and notice how your appetite and digestion improve. S.S.S. stimulates the flow of gastric juices and also supplies the precious mineral elements so necessary in blood-cell and hemo-globin building. Do try it. It may be the rainbow you need to brush away present discouragement over your health condition.

Do not be misled by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference is your guarantee of satisfaction.

FAREWELLS AND WELCOMES

ALL through the long summer Peter watched his feathered friends and learned things in regard to their ways he had never suspected. As he saw them keeping the trees of the Old Orchard free of insect pests, picking up countless seeds of weeds everywhere, and helping Farmer Brown in his garden, he began to understand something of the wonderful part these feathered people have in keeping God's Great World beautiful and worth living in. He had many a hearty laugh as he watched the bird babies learn to fly and to find their own food. All about him all summer long they were going to school, learning how to watch out for danger and how to use their eyes and ears and all the things a bird must know who would live to grow up.

As the days grew shorter and fall drew near Peter discovered that his feathered friends were gathering in flocks and roaming here and there. It was one of the first signs that summer was nearly over, and it gave him just a little feeling of sadness. He heard few songs, for the singing season was over. Also he discovered that many of his feathered friends had changed their finery for sober traveling suits in preparation for the long journey far south where they would spend the winter. The fact is, he actually failed to recognize some of them at first.

September came and some of Peter's friends bade him good-by. They were starting on the long journey, planning to take it in easy stages for the most part. Each day saw some fly away. As Peter thought of the dangers before them he wondered rather wistfully if he would ever see them again. But some there were who lingered even after Jack Frost's first visit. Welcome and Mrs. Robin, Winsome and Mrs. Bluebird, Little Friend the Song Sparrow and his wife were among these. But by and by even they were forced to leave.

Sad indeed and lonely would these days have been, for Peter had it not been that with the departure of the friends he had spent so many happy hours with was the arrival of certain other friends from the Far North, where they had their summer homes. Some of these stopped for a few days only. Others came to stay, and Peter was kept busy looking for and welcoming them. A few old friends of the summer would stay all winter. Sammy Jay was one. Downy and Hairy, the Woodpeckers, were others. And one there was whom Peter loved dearly; it was Tommy Tit the Chickadee.

FISH AND FISH SAUCES

FISH is always in season, as canned, pickled and smoked fish are available in almost any inland city when the fresh ones are not to be found in the market. There are occasions other than in hot weather when jellied fish is desirable; the following is a favorite:

Jellied Fish.

Remove the bones and skin of a two-pound fish. Chop fine and add a half cupful of water, a teaspoonful of grated onion, two dozen blanched and finely chopped almonds and a dash of cayenne. When all these ingredients are well blended pack into a mold and steam for an hour. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise dressing.

Fish a la Reine.

Put one tablespoonful of butter into a saucepan and when melted add one tablespoonful of flour, mix well and add one cupful of rich milk, stir and cook until smooth. Remove from the heat and add the yolk of one egg and three mushrooms finely chopped, a tablespoonful of minced parsley, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a dash of pepper. Add to this one and one-half cupfuls of flaked fish—any cold boiled or canned fish will serve. Heat over hot water and serve in potato baskets.

Roe Sauce.

To make roe sauce, wash the roe, drop into boiling water and simmer for twenty minutes; drain and with a silver fork remove all the membrane; add one-half cupful of butter and place over a dish of hot water; when very hot add a half cupful of cream, a half teaspoonful of onion juice, a teaspoonful of salt, a pinch of mace and serve in a sauce boat.

Sauce Tartar.

Place four egg yolks, four tablespoonfuls of water, and four tablespoonfuls of olive oil together. Stand in a dish of hot water and stir until the mixture thickens; take from the heat, add a tablespoonful of tarragon vinegar, two chopped olives, one chopped sour pickle and a tablespoonful of capers chopped fine; add one tablespoonful of finely minced parsley, a half teaspoonful of salt and a dash of cayenne. Serve at once.

Which Genius Flowers

We look in vain among the lists of great in science for a biologist who made his mark when still very young. This is to be explained by the fact that the biologist must rather an enormous mass of information before he can make any startling contribution to his science. Lamarck and Darwin are examples.

Even in what are called the "rational sciences" it is not always the young who are the most brilliant. Descartes was forty-one when he published his "Discourse on Method," and Newton forty-five when his "Mathematical Principles of Natural Philosophy" appeared. It was not until he had brooded over the planetary motions for 25 years that Kepler announced his famous laws. He was forty-eight by that time. Lagrange, one of the great mathematicians of his day, was seventy when he gave definite form to his "Analytic Mechanics" (1888). At seventy-eight the intellect of Laplace seemed as powerful as it ever was.

From these puzzling contrasts it is inferred that men are not all subject to the same laws of mental growth. The truth is that it is impossible to foretell when genius will flower.

Why Hospitals Use a Liquid Laxative

Hospitals and doctors have always used liquid laxatives. And the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. Do you know the reasons?

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right dose of a liquid laxative brings a more natural movement, and there is no discomfort at the time, or after.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good. A properly prepared liquid laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin brings safe relief from constipation. It gently helps the average person's bowels until nature restores them to regularity. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is an approved liquid laxative which all druggists keep ready for use. It makes an ideal family laxative; effective for all ages, and may be given to the youngest child.

He Gets Used to It
When a man is in office, his left ear must burn much of the time.

COLDS Creomulsion

Your own druggist is authorized to cheerfully refund your money on the spot if you are not relieved by Creomulsion.

WATCH YOUR KIDNEYS!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering impurities from the blood stream. But kidneys get functionally disturbed—lag in their work—fail to remove the poisonous body wastes.

Then you may suffer nagging headache, attacks of dizziness, burning, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains; feel "all worn out."

Don't delay! For the quicker you get rid of these poisons, the better your chances of good health.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They tend to promote normal functioning of the kidneys; should help them pass off the irritating poisons. Doan's are recommended by users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

What Duke Did With Its $40,000,000

TEN years ago people asked: "What will Duke college do as the main beneficiary of the $40,000,000 James B. Duke endowment?" This excellent air panorama gives the answer. On the edge of Durham township in North Carolina is Duke university, surrounded by a 5,000-acre campus; one of the most compact and beautiful in America. The unit was first occupied in 1930 after the completion of a $20,000,000 building program. In the foreground is the stadium, seating 35,000 persons. Also shown are the various athletic fields, baseball diamonds and tennis courts. The building unit is 4,156 feet long and is dominated by the 210-foot chapel tower which contains a carillon of 50 bells. The unit includes a medical school with a hospital of 456 beds with a separate $6,000,000 endowment. All of the buildings are of Gothic architecture. Physical development has been paralleled by academic growth. The Duke library has nearly 400,000 volumes and the faculty includes many internationally known scholars and scientists.

MENACING WAR DEBTS

The Federal Government has come to its very usual and annual embarrassment—dunning twelve European nations for the amount of $154,729,976, payments due on the various debts. Little Finland who deserves praise and honor for keeping its due portion on her debt paid up, will be on hand with the cash, while most of the other nations like France, in all possibility, will continue to default.

During and immediately after the World War, Uncle Sam loaned to twenty foreign nations the enormous total of $10,338,058,352. It was done in good part from a neighborly spirit, with a patriotic motive for ending war. Allied nations had to purchase munitions to prosecute the war; food stuffs for the relief of people during famine and food shortages throughout Europe; with this great obligation over five million barrels of wheat were shipped in at heavy cost.

In accordance with an act in February, 1922, agreements were entered into under which these obligations were funded at over eleven and a half billion dollars, with principal and interest, which the various nations agreed to pay. The sums of the individual nations ranged from five million dollars (Latvia) to over two billion (Italy). To date Uncle Sam is "holding the sack!"

The history of national debts is a gruesome tale of worry and mental hardship. Our first national public debt was thrust upon the Government in 1791, to the sum of $75,463,476. By the time of the war in 1812 it had increased to $127,334,993, but by 1835 it was reduced to $37,513,000. Things looked "rosy" and national prosperity seemed assured.

By 1860 when the Civil War began the debt had increased once more to $64,842,288, but when the war closed those five bloody years put us in debt $2,381,000,000.

Again in 1892 the debt was reduced to $585,000,000. When the new century dawned we were plunged into a $1,023,478,000 debt. We had reduced it to $965,706,000 in 1913, but at the close of the World War we jumped to $26,594,000,000. In 1928 our public debt was reduced to $17,467,000,000 with an increase up to a year ago to a total of $20,805,556,792.

War is a costly venture with no absolute benefit to nations or individuals, but it leaves its scars, ills and hatred memories as long as man lives and thinks.

It requires good management to make money. That is the best kind of a solution for certain individuals who seem to never succeed in business or anything else in which they engage. You have heard the caustic remark, "he never succeeds at anything;" and this is another good answer, for some people are just natural "drifters" in the mind—Builders of air castles. These are the kind whom we might call "rainbow chasers;" forever exploiting plans preceded with that big "if." Some of the honest, innocent and well-meaning are caught in this class. What benefactors these folks would be if they but had the ability and the means! Many have spent the best part of their life dreaming over this and that scheme which never seems to become a realization. It is a sad aspect for an existence, when one has spent his best days dreaming away opportunities; to come to declining years with nothing out of the common-place accomplished, while the sting of poverty reminds him of his wasted opportunity in a fleeting world where he must have the necessities of life.

The advent of December always brings pleasant anticipations because it is Yuletide season, and every day increases with cherished joy and happy interest that reach their climax on Christmas day. It is a busy month of enthusiasm, and in the household, on the street in shop and store or schoolroom, there is plenty of activity. Society is at its best, working out details for the great annual festival and anniversary event on the 25th. Renewed vigor and inspiration gets into the blood of every human breast; thus we show our appreciation for the great Man of Galilee on this natal day. Of all the months in the year, December holds a challenge to each mortal being for a better motive of living. Christmas cheer should warm icy hearts and give us gratitude for the privilege of living in a free born Christian nation and holding our citizenship where freedom and independence are our own.

The golden glow of California's Washington navel orange is adorning the trees of thousands of acres of groves throughout the state. There is always a glad welcome extended this delicious, juicy variety of the citrus family. More particularly perhaps, because of that rich flavor, prolific size, tender meat and appetizing qualification that always goes with the navel. This will be another bumper-crop year and to get ready for the harvest and packing season, great outlay in time and expense is being made to have every orchard appliance and packing-house device in place for the most economic saving to the growers and shippers. There always accompanies the fall harvest, that keen interest which goes with the Washington navel. This will be an exceptional year and many thousands of carloads will be shipped out of the Golden State.

President Roosevelt must have the human equipment for an exemplary life, for at one time during his younger days he was a Sunday-school teacher; therefore he has had a part in shaping and building citizenship and exerting an upright influence into the growing generation, for he later on said: "I am one who strongly believes that the Sunday-school teachers have helped shape American character." And there are said to be over two million of these sacred instructors in the United States today! This is a great compliment to the Bible; the next best compliment is that the Book is the world's best seller. Queen Victoria years ago, complimented the book with these remarks: "The Bible is the secret of Britain's greatness."

A New Sauce For Lamb

By Caroline B. King
Home Economics and Culinary Authority

THERE'S a new sparkle to cooking today, a new thrill, a new delight. We, who so long were forced to depend wholly on the good substantial fare of the era, have now awakened to the delectable bill of fare—we've learned to combine the usual thing in an unusual manner. We've learned to appreciate the fact that a soupcon of this and a dash of that can so change a seemingly trite dish, or lift from the ordinary a familiar sauce, that it becomes at once a food fit for the very gods themselves.

Take a plain every day roast of lamb, for instance, and you may choose either a choice leg or an inexpensive shoulder or breast, as you will. Cook it carefully as always, serve it hot or cold, but—dress it with a sauce that combines spicy flavors, rich fruit juices, sweetened with sugar, a few thin slices of wine, and what have you? Why a dish which might have been prepared for Cleopatra's feasting, or at least for the most critical gourmet of your acquaintance—it's all in the flavor, you see. And this sauce—how to make it—what to put into it—let's be specific as well as imaginative. So here are complete directions —Beat half a glass of current jelly with 4 tablespoons of sugar, add the grated rind of an orange with 2 tablespoons of the orange juice and 2 tablespoons of lemon juice. Whip in ¼ teaspoon salt and a generous dash of paprika, and mix all with 4 tablespoons of the liquid in the roasting pan, first, of course, removing the fat. Heat almost to boiling, then add 3 tablespoons of port or any dark wine you prefer. Serve hot with the hot roast or with broiled lamb chops, and hot also when you slice the remains of the cold lamb for next day's luncheon.

DUNCAN DEE woke, grunted and relaxed once more into a morning nap. Somewhere in his mind were two ideas. One was of complete satisfaction after an enjoyable two days in New York. The second pricked at him uncomfortably. Something he should remember, but couldn't. Oh . . . well! He sank gently back into full slumber.

At eleven o'clock, after breakfast in the house of his friends where he was staying, he became electrified. He had forgotten something. Something very important. A Christmas night dinner-dance that evening. He had been invited by Rosamond Tone, a girl he was quite mad about. How could he have forgotten? It seemed impossible. But Rosamond had telephoned him two evenings ago, exactly one minute before a hasty departure for New York. He had been delighted, charmed to take her. Then . . . that long freezing ride . . . finding a place to stay which did not cost too much, dressing, getting to a late party which was big and brisk, and went on and on until morning and breakfast. Then a few scant hours of sleep, another afternoon party outside the city . . . a sleet storm, and the sensible decision that he would not drive back in town for his evening clothes . . . but keep on going to the second informal engagement for the evening . . . a hundred and thirty miles in another direction, where he would stay all night.

So, here he was at eleven the next morning, a hundred and thirty miles from his evening clothes . . . and due in a few hours at a party forty miles in quite an opposite direction. This was the manner in which Duncan was wont to spread out his week-ends. Bedlam raged in his brain.

It wasn't the party so much; it was the girl. Rosamond Tone was more than lovely—she was lovable. She was also the daughter of old Taurus Tone, the head of the company in which Duncan held a responsible but not impressive position. And there was that guy named Frank Nester. He, too, held a responsible but not impressive position in the same place. He, too, loved Rosamond, or at least paid her conspicuous attention. Mr. Tone glared at both of them. It was old Taurus' way; and you could like it or leave it. No one wished to leave it, certainly not Duncan Dee nor that Frank Nester fellow.

At noon Duncan called up Rosamond long-distance, to assure her he had not forgotten and would be there. Immediately then he began scouring the town for dress clothes. All the people he knew were going to dances that night. They needed their own. He began to feel silly and a little sick. But he contrived in the course of three hours to collect one pair of dress-suspenders, a white tie, and proper waistcoat. Another hour yielded a dress-shirt and pair of trousers. This was sheer triumph of personality. Somebody let him have studs and a collar. He'd have to wear his ordinary black shoes and socks. He still required a coat. He could not get a coat!

Duncan went to the dinner dance. He looked exceptionally happy and well groomed. Frank Nester was there. He also looked well groomed but far from happy. Rosamond, if not unkind, had been frugal in giving dances to him.

Old Taurus was there, snorting and suspicious. Once he grabbed Duncan's elbow. "See here, young man," he growled, "that coat of yours looks darned familiar, and a little large. Could it, by any chance, be one of mine?"

"Yes, sir!" said Duncan, looking Rosamond's father straight in the eye. That was the best way with old Taurus. "My own is in New York. I collected all the other things from friends. I came anyway. And Rosamond . . ."

"I thought so!" Taurus glared at him. "Well, it appears you have courage, and that you keep your wits about you. It should help you get along. Report to me tomorrow morning. We'll talk over that . . . or . . . opening I mentioned."

"Oh, sir . . . I'll tell Rosamond right away."

"You'll do no such thing!" Taurus roared.

But Duncan told her. Rosamond said she had already selected a sweet apartment and an egg-beater. "In case you asked me, you know."

Duncan kissed her and stated he must be very careful not to spill anything on her father's coat . . . and they kissed again.

THE fear of moths need no longer influence one in buying furniture. These lovely mohair velvets and fringes that so many housewives have foregone through fear of moth damage can now be obtained with a five-year guarantee against moth damage. And, in the remote event that a moth should infest the upholstery there is no red-tape necessary for adjustment. The guarantee is backed with an insurance policy given to the buyer and in case of damage by moths you simply notify the underwriter, who makes good on the loss on labor, material and incidental charges.

CHURCHES OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST

"God the Only Cause and Creator" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all Christian Science churches, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

One of the Scriptural citations in the Lesson-Sermon presents Isaiah's words: "Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? there is no searching of his understanding. He giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might he increaseth strength. Even the youths shall faint and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fall; but they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint."

A passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, states: "We say, 'My hand hath done it.' What is this my but mortal mind, the cause of all materialistic action? ... The divine Mind includes all action and volition, and man in Science is governed by this Mind."

Who Owes Who A Living?

After it is all said and done, any recovery program depends upon business, industry and agriculture.

Every government expenditure is financed by money that is taken from the earnings or reserves of business, industry or agriculture. With no earnings to be taxed, government must go bankrupt.

It is useless to blind ourselves to the fact that today industry is afraid of radical legislation, radical labor policies and radical taxation.

Under the guise of "social service" plans a lot of people are being made to think that somebody owes them a living. That's the "grasshopper theory." It works fine until winter comes.

The fad of social service can live on existing "crops" (productive wealth) until it has eaten it all up like the grasshopper did the seasonal crops and then the beneficiaries of the "service" plans die like the grasshoppers unless they made food. It's just the law of nature. Try to beat it and see where you land—out in the cold like the grasshoppers.

Conferences are being held in this nation to devise means of promoting social security to lessen fear of unemployment, deprivation and dependence. All men regard that goal as most desirable. The great danger is that overly enthusiastic theorists will allow their hopes to dominate their good judgment and smother the virtue of individual thrift.

At such times they should be guided by the lowly grasshopper who found out that no one owed him a living and that if he wished to share in the stored labor of others he had to fiddle for the food he received.

PERSONAL LOANS REPORTED INCREASING

The growing rate of increase in personal loans during the past few months appears to indicate a decided change in the attitude of the public toward borrowing and reflects an increasing sense of confidence as to future business conditions, according to Dr. A. H. Giannini, chairman of Bank of America's general executive committee.

"Confidence in California's future is indicated in a marked increase in personal loan activity in all Bank of America's branches throughout California," said Dr. Giannini. "The number and totals of personal loans granted so far this year have been more than double the totals for both 1933 and 1932."

"Doctors' fees and medical expenses accounted for 33 percent of the loans, while 23 percent went to assist relatives and 20 percent to meet existing bills. Repairs, improvements and taxes accounted for 15 percent of this year's total, six percent was borrowed for use in business, and the remaining three percent being for miscellaneous expenditures."

"The average loan was for $230, the age of the borrower averaged 38 years and his income $170 per month. Twenty-seven percent of the borrowers were clerical workers and 24 percent public employees. Other borrowers were classified as follows: Skilled workers, 15 percent; professional men and women, 12 percent; and business men, five percent."

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

At next Sunday afternoon's forum lecture at the Theosophical headquarters, Point Loma, "Practical Occultism" will be the subject, and he speaker, Miss Judith Tyberg, instructor in Sanskrit at Theosophical university and of mathematics in Lomaland school. She will be assisted in answering questions by Miss Grace Knoche, instructor in clay-modeling and drawing in the art department of the last named institution. Both these speakers were born and educated at Point Loma.

Miss Tyberg studied Sanskrit under Dr. Gottfried de Purucker and is now actively collaborating with him in the preparation of the definitions of Sanskrit terms for an Encyclopedic Glossary of Technical terms used in the Esoteric Philosophy.

"Practical Occultism," says Miss Tyberg, "is in fact higher education and gives the student mastery of the technique of that higher, fuller life of the mind and spirit to which thinking human beings aspire. It is preparation for that higher stage of life next to be entered upon consciously by the human race in which the code of ethics demands altruism, and rewards the practice of it by the unfolding of spiritual faculties having the power to bless Humanity."

SYNOPSIS

Prudence Schuyler comes to Prosperity Farm to make a new life for herself and her brother, David, his health broken by tragedy. The second day on her farm Prue falls from the barn loft into the arms of Rodney Gerard, rich young man, a neighbor. There is at once a mutual attraction, but Prudence suspects men since her sister's husband ran away with her brother's wife. Len Calloway tries to buy Prue's timber, but she contracts with Rod to dispose of the trees. David comes to the farm. Prue accompanies Rod and Jean, Rod's thirteen-year-old niece, to a circus. Chicot, an old clown, is accidentally killed. He was the grandfather of Milly Gooch, one of the circus riders. Rod became friendly with Milly when she lived on Prosperity Farm. Calloway intimidates laborers so that they cannot be hired to cut the timber for Rodney Gerard. Milly Gooch broke her engagement to Calloway; he believes Rod was the cause and has since been his enemy. After Chicot's death Rod calls on Milly to see if he can be of any help. Prue sees in a newspaper a flashlight picture of him with Milly. Rodney goes to New York for timber cutters, taking David with him to help select men from among the Rescue Mission hangers-on. Rod sends word of his coming, with a crew of laborers.

"Light the lamp, Jean," said Prudence.

Jane Mack clutched her shoulder. "No! No! The convict might see and s-s-shoot. I know folks."

"Pull yourself together. Wait till I've drawn the hangings, Jean."

"Don't go near those windows, Miss Prue."

"Nonsense, Macky. All right, Jean. Light the lamp."

Spooky shadows cast by the wavering flashlight skulked into corners as a soft glow suffused the room.

"That's better. The light will send your bad dream hustling, Macky. Sit down and tell us what happened."

Jane Mack twisted her bony hands. Jean, in her candy-striped pajamas, put her arm about Prue's waist. The woman sniffed.

"You two girls think I've had a dream, don't you? Well, I haven't. I was just getting into bed—I thought I heard a door creak down here. I stole down quietly. I didn't want to scare you. I tiptoed to this door. A man was flashing a light over that!" She pointed a blanching finger toward the safe. "You'd left it unlocked."

"I knew in a minute 'twas the escaped prisoner I'd been expecting. I guess I gurgled. He pulled his light lower over his eyes. Pointed his light straight at my face, so I couldn't see anything."

"Got you covered. Make a s-s-sound, woman, and I'll s-s-shoot!" he hissed.

Prudence's eyes widened with incredulity. Could this vibrant, dramatic woman be the taciturn, dour spinster who cooked and scrubbed for her every day?

Jane Mack swallowed hard. "All I could think of was the money you had tied up in those jewels, Miss Prue, and what 'twould mean if you lost them. What was this old body of mine good for, anyway? So I yelled."

"I'll say you yelled. Then what did the man do?" Jean demanded. "Did he shoot?"

"If he did, I didn't know it." "Perhaps he sneaked in to look around because he was born here or his father died here; we haven't had one of those old-timers drop in on us for a week."

Jane Mack sniffed. "Better look and see if the 'old-timer' got any of your jewels."

"Never mind the jewels, Macky. I deserve to lose them for forgetting to close the safe. Sure you are not hurt?"

"Sure, Miss Prue."

Jean was on her knees before the safe frantically examining the white packets when Prudence reached it. She looked up with frightened eyes. "Gone!" she whispered.

"What's gone?"

"The emerald and diamonds!"

"You ought to set the sheriff after that convict," Jane Mack insisted for the third time the next afternoon.

At the kitchen table Prudence was snipping the stems of the roses before placing them in vases of fresh water. Impulsively she put an arm about Jean's shoulder and hugged her as the child drew a long, hard breath. She knew what she was thinking, knew that she was remembering the look in her father's eyes as he had asked if the jewels were kept in the house. Of course, Walter Gerard had not stolen the gems, he wouldn't fall so low as that, but—

"I'll wait until Mr. David comes, Macky. He will be here so soon that we had better consult him before we enter complaint."

"Well, of course, if you can afford to lose that emerald and the diamonds, Miss Prue, it's up to you. If you'd seen what I saw in my teacup this morning—" With a sniff Jane Mack disappeared into the pantry.

Snug in fur coats, red beret and green beret making brilliant spots of color in the gray day, Prudence, with Jean, backed the cart out of the shed.

They were too early for the train. In the village they indulged lavishly in ice-cream cones, and still the minutes lagged.

"Let's drive out the pond road a little way, Jean."

Prue's thoughts wandered. Why had Dave decided to stay at High Ledges? It would make it awkward for her. Of course, she would want to see Dave daily; equally, of course, distrusting Rodney Gerard as she did, she couldn't go to High Ledges.

Rodney! She had wondered if Calloway had forged that letter about the check. After Jean's revelation about the photograph she had found in her uncle's desk, how could she doubt any more? Walter Gerard had been right, the unfinished word was love, of course. "Flitting from flower to flower!" Mrs. Walt had been right, too, her brother-in-law was unreliable. He was the type of man Julie had married.

She must put the Gerards out of her mind. They were becoming an obsession. Her own affairs needed all her attention. Who had stolen the jewels? The escaped convict? She did not believe it any more than she believed that Walter Gerard was the thief.

"Here comes Mr. Calloway in that snappy red car of his."

Jean's excited whisper set Prue's pulses quickstepping. Calloway on his way to the village! How soon was the train due? She pushed back her glove. Madding. She had forgotten her wrist watch. Jim Armstrong had said: "I wish Calloway might be providentially called out of town an hour or so before that train arrives."

Evidently Providence was busy elsewhere. Could she stop him? "Success" was in line with the pasture bars from which a path—now a mere shadow under the snow—led uphill to the southerly boundary of her property, The Hundreds. That gave her an idea. She would ask him to show her the trees he wanted to cut. It would be adventure with a capital A to lead him off the scent, and she loved adventure. She gripped Jean's arm.

"Stop a minute! Drive the car home, K. K. Don't go to the village. At the crossroads take the turn to the right; that will bring you to the back of the red brick house."

"What's the big idea?"

"I'll ask Len Calloway to show me where he wants to cut. If he consents, I will keep him away from the village until the new gang is at High Ledges."

"Good afternoon, Mr. Calloway." Prudence acknowledged the sweep of the dark-eyed man's ten-gallon hat with gay friendliness. "This is a clear case of thought transference. I suppose seeing that path to The Hundreds brought you to my mind. I hate quarreling with my neighbors, it's so—so tenement-housey. Can't we arbitrate? Perhaps when you have time you'll tramp over the land with me and show me what to cut—but I'm detaining you. Drive on, Jean."

"Just a minute!" Calloway's near-set eyes were triumphant. "What's the matter with now, Miss Schuyler? My business at the village can wait. What say if we take that tramp now? This snow won't amount to much."

Prudence smiled the most radiant smile in her not limited repertoire. "I'm all for it, if you are, Mr. Calloway. I'm the original 'Do-it-now' girl." She looked intently at Jean. "Wait here, won't you, K. K. I—"

"Don't have the kid wait. I'll take you home, Miss Schuyler."

"That would help. Drive very carefully, Jean, and straight home, remember. Tell Miss Mack that Mr. Calloway is personally conducting me over The Hundreds. Go out to the barn and tell Mr. St. He and I were planning to set an incubator this afternoon, but that can wait." Having posted which two sentinels on the ramparts of protection, she stepped over the bars that Calloway lowered.

Why didn't the man speak? He was leading the way along the snowy path. Woods stretched endlessly ahead, dense, dark, dismal. She didn't for an instant doubt Calloway's respectability, but she had a shivery sense of repressed fury smoldering under his urbanity.

"Here we are!" Calloway stopped to brush the snow from the top of a granite boulder. "See that B cut in the stone? It marks the southeastern corner of the tract your uncle purchased from my father. Here's a trail. We'll go in a little way so that you can see the quality of the timber."

"All sweetness and light again, aren't you?" Prudence mentally addressed his straight back as she followed him. He paused and turned.

"Sorry to have made trouble for you about your timber, Miss Schuyler, but when I say I'll put a thing through, I do it, no matter what the consequences may be to anyone else."

Prudence looked up at him. Wistfulness was entirely out of her line, but she did her best with voice and eyes.

"Suppose—suppose—is it too late to change my mind and let you—"

The shrill whistle of a locomotive shattered the silence. The train had arrived! In a moment or two the gang would be on its way to High Ledges, and Calloway was here! Prudence lowered her lids. She felt as if her eyes were twinkling stars of triumph.

"Suppose I agreed to let you cut my timber, would you still try to stop Rodney Gerard?"

Calloway, who had started on again, turned. Prudence stopped so as better to preserve the distance between them. His massive figure blocked the trail where it divided and ran east and west.

"Do you mean that you'll chuck Rod Gerard and give me the contract to cut? Do you mean that?"

His eyes burned red as he hurled the question. Perhaps it was the shadow of his theatrical hat that gave the effect. Whatever the cause, she didn't like it. Prudence told herself. She would back track as soon as she was sure the men were well away from the village.

"Can't a girl change her mind?"

Calloway's eyes flamed. He caught her shoulder. She shook off his hand. "Don't!"

"Sorry. I didn't mean any harm, Miss Schuyler. Say listen, I'm a just man, but I don't stop at anything, get me, anything when I've been double-crossed. I'll pay Rodney Gerard for interfering in my affairs—it goes back long before he thought of cutting timber—if I never do anything else in my life, but I don't want a fight with you. I'm crazy about you. Marry me, and I'll cut your logs, sell them, and turn the money over to you. You can have your own bank account."

"Oh, c-can I! You don't really mean it? Your romantic attack of the subject thrills me."

She must not chuckle like that, and she had better cut out sarcasm, she warned herself. How long since the whistle had blown? She hated the eyes looking down at her. He was coming nearer. Perhaps he was a little mad. Violent-tempered people sometimes ended that way. Should she make a break into the woods. Of course, Calloway would follow, and somehow she would elude him. She couldn't get lost.

"Well?" "Really, Mr.—Len—you've surprised me so that I'm all jittery."

Her laugh made no dent in his glowing regard.

"I'm not in the habit of snapping up an offer of a heart and hand. You must allow me time to think." She pushed back the sleeve of her cardigan. "My word! Have I dropped my wrist watch? I must go back. David gave it to me and I wouldn't lose it for all the timber in the world. Please help me hunt for it."

Her suggestion roused opposition, as she had hoped it would.

"We're going on. Looking the lay-out over was your idea. Don't be a quitter. I've got you here; you'll stay. I'll go back for the watch. I can find it quicker alone. Wait here."

Taking compliance for granted, he stalked back. As he disappeared around a bend, Prudence darted along the trail which turned sharply east.

She went on cautiously looking for the blaze on trees. No sign of human occupation. She stopped to listen. Was Calloway following? Did he think her a quitter? She wasn't. She was, to use a favorite legal term of David's, merely "in the exercise of due care," while she diverted his attention from the village.

The trees thinned. What was that sound? A brook! She couldn't be far from home if it was the stream which crossed her lower meadow. She climbed a high bank, drew a long, ragged breath of relief. No danger of being lost now. She had her bearings.

"Hulloa! Hulloa—o—"

Calloway shouting. A thin gray fog of doubt dimmed her satisfaction in the success of her role of Providence. Perhaps her idea hadn't been such a knockout after all. She had better get home. The trail on the other side, a little way down stream, looked familiar. She would wade to that.

Zowie, the water was icy. She slipped on slimy, concealed rocks, splashed through pebbly shallows, plunged into a good pool.

"I'll bet I gave the trout the thrill of their lives," she said aloud, as she pulled herself up by shrubs to the bank. A fresh blaze! She had seen Jim Armstrong slash it. She was on the home trail now! Better rest for a moment.

"Hullo—o—o—"

The call set her nerves vibrating. It didn't frighten her, but she didn't like it. It was too near. The woods seemed to be closing in on her. She hated the feeling. She couldn't be mistaken about this trail. She was sure that she had been on it before. She must get into the open. She was freezing.

She ran as swiftly as clutching bushes and treacherous tree roots permitted. Her cold, wet skirts lashed her knees; her teeth chattered. How long could she keep this pace? Darn! What fiend had looped that root across the trail? She picked herself up. Ouch! What a lump! Lucky she had struck in the middle of her forehead, not under her eyes.

What was that? Was she just seeing things, or was it—it was a log cabin! She had been following the freshly blazed trail to her cabin instead of one to the clearing! What difference did it make? There was a chimney. She could get warm.

She stumbled toward it. Threw herself against the door. It opened! The breaks were with her! She plunged in. Lost her balance. Some one caught her.

She stared unbelievably. Closed her eyes. Opened them. She was awake. Every hard-drawn breath had been wasted; every step she had run, every fall had been futile. Calloway's furious, triumphant eyes blazed down at her.

CHAPTER IX

Sudden, uncontrollable panic shook Prudence. In the tense silence she stared up into Calloway's inscrutable face.

"Thought you'd double-cross me, didn't you? There are several trails to this cabin."

At his harsh voice her mind and courage sprang to arms.

"My cabin, isn't it? I had no idea it was so—so luxurious."

She forced her eyes to move slowly, as if appraisingly from the antlers over the fireplace to the water bucket on the bench by the door, on to the wood pile near the hearth with an ax leaning again it. That ax—she looked away quickly. Calloway must not suspect that it had seemed like meeting an unexpected friend.

"Rather nice. I came here the other day with Jim Armstrong, but we didn't come in."

She was talking against time. Surely Jean must have reached the red brick house by this time. Must have told someone where she was.

"Better sit down," Calloway suggested with sickening suavity. He pushed forward a wooden chair.

"Thank you. I prefer to stand here." Prudence caught hold of the great shelf of rock, which served as a mantel, with a grip which turned her nails white.

"Suit yourself. When you beat it, I figured that any path you'd take would lead here. I took a short cut and started the fire. There were red coals; someone's been using the place. Sorry I can't provide a lamp. It's getting dark outside."

If Prudence had distrusted the man back on the trail, she hated him now, hated his mocking smile to which the flickering light gave a Satanic twist. She took a step forward.

"Then we had better start home at once. I'm wet and cold."

In one move he was between her and the door.

Dutch Guiana Once Was Closely Related to U. S.

Surinam, or Dutch Guiana as it is usually called, was very closely related to the United States in one period of the latter's history, says a writer in the Chicago Tribune. At the Treaty of Breda, 1667, the British ceded Surinam to the government of the Netherlands as a partial payment for having seized New Netherland from the Dutch a few years before. Had this exchange not been made, and had the Dutch been confirmed by treaty in their possession of what is now New York, the United States might never have existed, since the most active agitators for a separation from England would have been divided by a foreign territory.

New England would have been quickly subdued, and the other colonies intimidated. The map of America might still show the Spanish colonies of Florida, Mexico, Texas, and California; the French in possession of the Mississippi valley, and the British as far south as the Columbia river on the Pacific coast. Perhaps, therefore, the United States may be grateful that there was an English claim to territory in Guiana, which could be traded to the Dutch for her claim on New York.

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY

by Vance Wynn © Public Ledger

The Modern Jekyll and Hyde Mystery

THERE is nothing particularly sensational in a single robbery in one section of a city but when a dozen occur in as many nights and they all show evidence of having been committed by the same person, it is time to sit up and take notice.

That was the feeling of the Brooklyn police not long ago when indignant householders came, one after another, to enter complaints about a strange man who was terrorizing the peaceful City of Churches.

Detective Krummel was detailed to make an investigation, and he did it with the thoroughness with which the modern detective is compelled to work when he matches his wits against the expert criminal.

One of the victims was the minister of a prominent Methodist Episcopal church. Krummel first obtained a description of all the stolen goods, and then with the assistance of the police bureau, he made inquiry in all the pawnbroking establishments of the city.

One of the articles that had been purloined was a handsome watch, which happened to have certain marks upon it by which it could readily be identified.

After the lapse of some days this watch was found in a Brooklyn pawnshop.

The proprietor said the bit of jewelry had been pawned by a young woman.

It required time and ingenuity to trace this person but she was found eventually, and when questioned said that the watch had been given to her by another woman.

This second woman was located and she said that it had been given to her by one James Hafey.

It was not difficult to find the residence of this man, but when the detective went there he was confronted by an unusual state of affairs.

The wife of James Hafey was at home, and she proved to be a woman of culture and refinement. The home also gave every evidence of being that of persons in good, if not affluent circumstances.

When she learned of the charge that was made against her husband she was amazed and indignant.

Mrs. Hafey said that she had been married for some years and that her husband was employed by the United States government at a salary of something like $100 a week.

His working hours, she said, were from four in the afternoon until shortly after midnight.

He was a model husband in every way, and was extremely generous to her.

She was unable to state the exact nature of his employment, but said that he spent all excepting his working hours with her.

Together they visited the art galleries and places of amusement and altogether had an ideal and happy existence.

It was a perplexing situation, he cause if the suspicions of the police were true, this man must be a regular Raffles, if not a modern counterpart of the celebrated Jekyll and Hyde.

One of the victims of the robberies was a merchant who complained of the loss of a quantity of jewelry belonging to his wife.

A watch was set upon the odd Mr. Hafey, and this particular victim was stationed in a place where he could see the suspect without being seen.

After the test had been made he said: "I have no doubt about it. This man is the same person whom I saw coming down the driveway of my home on the evening that the robbery took place."

This was important, but it was not quite sufficient for legal evidence.

The detective managed to get into the house of Hafey at a time when he was not at home, and he made a thorough search of the premises.

In a room that was kept locked he found a quantity of goods that scarcely belonged to the couple.

The find included seven suitcases filled with jewelry, furs, silver, cut glass and numerous articles of women's wear.

One of the detectives said at the time: "Judging from the number of things that have been identified by the owners Hafey must have committed something like thirty burglaries between the first of January and the middle of April."

He was taken into custody amid the tears and protestations of his wife. Personally he was silent but the magistrate before whom he was taken held him in $10,000 bail to await the action of the grand jury.

The Cherokee Alphabet

The Cherokee alphabet was invented by Sequoyia, a member of the Cherokee tribe, observes a writer in the Washington Star. The importance of the art of writing and printing as instruments and weapons of civilization began to impress him in 1809, and he studied undismayed by the discouragement and ridicule of his fellows, to elaborate a system of writing suitable to the Cherokee language. In 1821 he submitted his syllabary to the chief men of the nation, and on their approval the Cherokee of all ages set about to learn it with such zeal that after a few months thousands were able to read and write their language.

"When a Fellow Needs a Friend"

Authority Advances Opinion It Is When He Is Very Young.

Dr. Samuel W. Hartwell, director of one of the largest child guidance clinics in the country, is thoroughly convinced that the time in his life when he most needs a friend is when a fellow is very young. In The Parents' Magazine the eminent psychiatrist stresses the vital importance of youthful comradeships and pleads with parents to take a hand in helping their youngsters win and hold their playmates. Says the doctor:

"Early and repeated social interchange between children of the same age helps the child to meet one of the most critical periods of the growing-up process. The child must have the emotional release which comes in the response of other people, if he is to control his fears and meet his failures." Then, lest dotting parents fancy they are sufficient unto the demand, Doctor Hartwell adds: "Yet the child must not have the continual conflict that comes when the release is brought about through a continuance of immature relationships with parents."

Friends help little Bill to try himself out while he is yet young enough to be mostly concerned about himself. They help him translate his imagination into reality. They aid him in learning that happiness can come from loving others than members of his own family. Friends help the average child to find other reasons than the fear of punishment, fear of losses or feeling of guilt to give to himself for behaving in a socially accepted way.

Since, then, the role of friends of the child's own age is so important, it is the wise father and mother who provide opportunities for the child to meet desirable playmates, to allow the child free time for his play; to provide means for the child to furnish his share of play equipment; not to deny the child chance for taking part in group activities.

Doctor Hartwell reminds parents that their own choice of behavior patterns are not necessarily the behavior patterns their children prefer, and advises them for the most part to allow their youngsters to choose their own friends because: "Well-adjusted and happy children are usually wise in their choice." Admitting that it may be a mistake to allow too easily influenced youngsters to associate with the ill-behaved, the psychiatrist argues that because every individual some time must associate with others who do not behave as he does or believes he should, it is better for the great majority to early realize they can enjoy a pleasant relationship with others and not copy behavior if such behavior does not meet with their approval.

If parents wish to check up on the value of friendships for the young, all they need to do is to mark the child's responses. If he finds satisfaction in being gregarious, shows a growth in unselfishness, begins to like to do things for himself, develops loyalties, shows an ability to be happy and comfortable when not in the immediate proximity of his parents, then all is well in his own small world and with himself.

Father's Ingenuity

A Christmas Story
By Alice B. Palmer

IT WAS just two weeks before Christmas and there did not appear to be any material means of attaining the necessary funds for the great celebration.

"Oh dear, if John would only sell that old heirloom," thought Marty Armstrong.

Just then Betty and Jerry came charging in from high school. "Oh, Mother, I just can't wait until Christmas. I know you are going to get that tuxedo for me. I can see it now, oh boy!" exclaimed Jerry.

"And I can see that party gown. Mother, with slippers to match," said Betty, sweetly.

"It's no use expecting anything this year, children," said mother. "Your father has made some unwise investments."

"Here comes father, now!"

"Hello, everybody, what's up? Why the frigid atmosphere?" queried father.

"Mother says there's to be no Santa Claus this year," ventured Jerry.

The next few days John Armstrong was trying to figure it all out. Perhaps he had been a little negligent in the past few years concerning his family. Now he realized that he must make amends.

Christmas bells were chiming, reminding the Armstrong family that 'twas truly Christmas eve. Mother and the children were thinking of the things they were not going to get for Christmas. But father was chuckling inwardly. In fact he could scarcely keep from bursting out laughing; but that, of course, would never do.

The silence was broken by the jingling of sleigh-bells. They hurried en masse to see what it was all about.

Were they all dreaming? There stood an old-fashioned bobsled. Out stepped Santa Claus.

"Why, Uncle Joe, what are you doing here on Christmas eve?" exclaimed Mother, all excited.

"I've come to take you and the family for a ride. So bundle up and hop in, without delay."

All stared at one another and tried to speak, but not a word was uttered. They simply obeyed their Santa Claus and within a few moments Father and all were seated cozily within the fair-land contraption and were driven off.

The sleigh stopped with a jerk, right in front of a stucco bungalow all brilliantly lighted up with Christmas decorations.

"Why, I never knew the Thompson home was for rent. It has stood vacant so long," said Mother, with great concern.

"A friend of mine from the office just purchased it," said Father, with a convincing smile.

"We were invited over to see it in its new regalia. But you were all out of sorts that I called up Uncle Joe and ordered the Santa Claus ruse."

They all laughed most heartily. They couldn't help it—Christmas or no Christmas! They had to give father credit for his clever ingenuity.

Out they hopped, beaming with the Christmas spirit.

Father took the lead and rang the doorbell, but no one answered.

Then he actually turned the knob as they all stepped back in protestation.

"Merry Christmas!" shouted Father. Too surprised to speak, they looked at one another and back again at father and then—

"Don't you understand? Oh, hang it all, anyway! This is your Christmas present," said father, sinking into the closest easy chair and gasping for breath.

"What?" they all exclaimed.

Then father explained it all to them—how he had sold the old heirloom, purchased the home and furnished it.

They marveled!

"How could you? When did you? How did you know just what we liked?" All these questions were fired at father at once.

Father had done a perfect job. But that wasn't all. He led them proudly into the living room where stood the real host of the evening—the gorgeous Christmas tree. Needless to say Jerry received his "tux," Betty her gown and slippers and mother a set of silverware, a long-desired luxury.

Then descended such a shower of Christmas hugs and kisses, gratitude and joy that dear old father was practically snowed under. But he enjoyed his Christmas presents better than all the material gifts he had bestowed upon his family; and he felt that his heart was filled with enough Christmas cheer to last forever.

A New Way With Left-Over Ham

By Caroline B. King
Home Economics and Culinary Authority

NO matter how delicious the boiled or baked ham was when you first served it, or even the day afterward, there is sure to come an occasion when you look at it and wonder how you will ever face the family if you set it before them again. Food is like that, you know—heavenly the first day, delicious the next, acceptable the third. But—well, you know how it is, especially with the end of a whole baked or boiled ham.

But have you ever tried transforming it into an entirely different and intriguing dish? Something so unlike its first appearance that it can scarcely be recognized? If not you will enjoy the method I am about to describe, and I'm quite sure the family will demand this good Ham a la Raleigh so often you will be obliged to purchase the cooked variety just to satisfy their longing.

Ham a la Raleigh requires 1 cup of cooked diced ham, or you may shred it if more convenient, 3/4 glass plum or other tart jelly, 3 tablespoons granulated sugar, 1/2 tablespoon butter, and 3/4 glass sherry. (Corned beef or tongue may be substituted for ham.)

Arrange the diced ham in a baking dish, blend the other ingredients together, adding paprika and salt as well if necessary, pour over the meat, cover and set in a moderate oven to simmer slowly for half an hour or a little longer if necessary. The sauce should permeate the meat well in order to bring out the haunting, delicate flavor which is so desirable.

Serve on a platter with a border of mashed or browned sweet potatoes, or French fried sweet potatoes, as you like. In either case add a little sugar and sherry to them, mashing it in, or sprinkling it over them.

A fruit salad with coffee, crackers and cheese, completes a light supper or dinner that is unique and tempting.
